

Biography of Professor Kim Chow Hei-man

Kim Chow Hei-man is an Assistant Professor in the School of Life Sciences, Faculty of Science at CUHK. She received undergraduate and doctoral training at the University of Hong Kong, postdoctoral training at Cornell University in the US and the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology. In July 2019, Professor Chow joined CUHK and started her independent research programme investigating the roles of metabolic dysfunction in ageing and neurodegenerative disorders. She was a recipient of the National Natural Science Foundation Excellent Young Scientist Fund in 2020.